Term 4, Week 6

Tuesday, 19th November, 2019

More and more main-stream media provides articles on how education is grappling with the alignment of the development of children with the effects of modern technology. Interestingly the Western Australian State Government has acknowledged the impact of mobile phone use in schools and has banned them from all use within school time, starting in 2020. One important factor that led to this ban was the concern for the social and emotional development in children. Many teachers reported students spending much of their break/lunch times communicating on social media rather than talking directly to their friends. It's gratifying to see the concern for social development becoming a main-stream issue and an emergence of the importance of building emotional intelligence through unmediated, self-directed contact between individuals.

In 2015 UNESCO released the following statement about the future of education:

'We need to empower children to take active roles in the face of global challenges – to become contributors to a world characterised by greater peace, tolerance and inclusion.'

Such empowerment will come from building the human capacities that are inherent in each child. Waldorf education is based on building these human capacities through a broad and integrated curriculum with a diverse range of experiences. In many ways we are the ground breakers for recognising the basic needs of children and providing them with relevant experiences to satisfy their innate needs and their inherently creative and social natures. Our aim is to develop these capacities and skills within all children in such a way that, as adults, they will be able to thrive and contribute to positive and innovative changes to the society of the future.

We don't subscribe to having the students achieve a particular outcome, such as ATAR examinations, but rather focus on allowing each child to awaken and develop their own special qualities that they bring into the world. The skills of the future such as creativity, curiosity, lifelong learning, critical thinking, innovation, connectedness and positivity are all at the core of Waldorf education. From the kindergarten, through all the primary classes and right to the end of high school, the children/students are engaged artistically and academically in an age appropriate ways to develop these skills. One aspect of this ongoing development is the energetic involvement in class plays each year from Class 1 right through to Class 12. This week Class 8A is performing Shakespeare's A Midsummer Night's Dream in Williams Hall. Next week Class 5 is performing in the Greek Drama Psyche and Eros in Seekers Place. And at the end of next week at Subiaco Art Centre Class 12s are performing their final play, Shakespeare's As You Like It. It is a feast of drama which culminates in Class 12s last educational requirement at Perth Waldorf School. It is a wonderful way to finish their school journey, in which many capacities are developed and friendships consolidated.

Mark Phillips - High School Coordinator

IN THE LIGHT OF A CHILD

*Drawn out into the sheen, the shine, the glisten and the gleam,
It would be easy to be lost into a dream.*

*So I must rouse myself and start
To conjure forces of the heart,
Which live within me truly and will bring
The strength and majesty that make me like a king!*

*Amidst the glory of the sense-world, everywhere displayed,
In sunlit grove and glen and leafy glade,
It is the human heart that rules and reigns supreme!*

Michael Hedley Burton

GENERAL NEWS

ADMINISTRATION STAFF PROFESSIONAL DEVELOPMENT DAY

Friday last saw the school's Admin team - staff from the front office and high school office - down tools and head to Fremantle for a day of leadership development. At the atmospheric Kidogo Arthouse overlooking the cooling blue of Bather's Bay, we spent the morning in an appreciative inquiry workshop lead by Dr Rashmi Watson, focusing on the positive aspects of our team and the strengths of our organisation. Through guided conversations and group work, we uncovered the qualities and values that engender positive working relationships and inspire us. PWS Sculpture teacher Sarah McCarthy led our afternoon art therapy workshop, in which we reflected on and shared our impressions and learnings while manipulating clay and making pinch pots, candle holders, spoons and other small decorative items. The feedback after the PD day was overwhelmingly positive, and everyone in the Admin team is very appreciative of the opportunity to participate.

EARLY CHILDHOOD

FROM THE COORDINATOR

There is a sense of the coming of Advent in our area as the first of the local Christmas Trees - Nuytsia Floribunda - start to show their brilliant gold flowers. As the days are hot, the children feel the freedom and expansion of the senses: they need plenty of water and rest.

I am offering an article which de-constructs the act of sharing a book with a young child. What is happening at the neurological level is fascinating and informative. Happy reading!

By Meghan Cox Gurdon

Jan. 18, 2019 10:22 am ET

Millions of people—perhaps you're one of them—have watched viral videos of a Scottish granny collapsing in laughter while she reads to a baby. Comfortable on a sofa with her grandson, Janice Clark keeps cracking up as she tries to read "The Wonky Donkey" and, in a second video recorded a few months later, "I Need a New Bum."

Her raspy burr sounds great, and she's fun to watch, but the real genius of the scene is what's happening to the baby. Tucked beside her, he's totally enthralled by the book in her hands. In the second video especially, because he's older, you can see his eyes tracking the illustrations, widening in amazement each time that she turns the page. He's guileless, unaware of the camera. He has eyes only for the pictures in the book.

What's happening to that baby is both obvious and a secret marvel. A grandmother is weeping with laughter as she reads a story, and her grandson is drinking it all in—that's obvious. The marvel is hidden inside the child's developing brain. There, the sound of her voice, the warmth of her nearness and, crucially, the sight of illustrations that stay still and allow him to gaze at will, all have the combined effect of engaging his deep cognitive networks.

Unbeknown to him and invisible to the viewer, there is connection and synchronization among the different domains of his brain: the cerebellum, the coral-shaped place at the base of the skull that's believed to support skill refinement; the default mode network, which is involved with internally directed processes such as introspection, creativity and self-awareness; the visual imagery network, which involves higher-order visual and memory areas and is the brain's means of seeing pictures in the mind's eye; the semantic network, which is how the brain extracts the meaning of language; and the visual perception network, which supports the processing of visual stimuli.

And it is all happening exactly when it needs to happen, which is early. In the first year of life, an infant's brain doubles in size. By his second birthday, synapses are forming for language and many other higher cognitive functions. And by the time he's blowing out five candles on his birthday cake, today's viral-video infant celebrity will have passed through

In preparation for Advent, we will be offering a very special artistic workshop for Cygnet and Swan parents. Artist Lesley Cotter will lead you through a very easy technique with softly coloured pastels to make your own picture expressing the Madonna and child. The picture that she helps you create serves as a way to open into the pure gesture of the mother and child. It is a universal expression of the arriving soul being nurtured by the enfolding parent. The meditative mood of this time together is a wonderful balm for the busy time that has come to typify the lead-up to Christmas. Do join us.

6.00pm, Tuesday 26th November or 9.00am Wednesday 27th November.

Participants are limited at 15 for each workshop.

Bookings essential - please contact Reception to put your name on the list.

CLASS 5 MAIN LESSON

In Class 5, students explore the plant kingdom by discovering the beauty of the natural world. To observe plants and deepen our connection to local place we went on many bushwalks through our campus over the year, as well an excursion to Kings Park. The growth and structure of the archetypal plant from seed to roots, shoots, leaves, stem, blossom and eventually fruit were examined and compared across species. Understanding the relationship of the plant to its environment, its interaction with pollinators, as well as Aboriginal wisdom of the plants have been an interesting part of our exploration.

WESTERN SHEOAK

Allocasuarina fraseriana, commonly known as the Western Sheoak, is native to the south-east of Western Australia. It grows mainly around the coastal areas and in open forests.

HABITAT:
Sheoaks prefer to grow in sandy clay soils, but they can grow in most soil types.
The sheoak is very hardy. It can withstand blazing cold winter winds and hot dry summers.
It grows to the height of about 10m but when its exposed to the fully sunlit winds it is unusually slender. It usually has a diameter of about 0.5 to 1 meter in diameter.

DESCRIPTION:
The sheoak is a greenish-grey colour and slender, and generally they are called a claspole which is not shaped like a normal tree but is flattened and needle-like. It has little or no bark, except on the lower part of the trunk where it is smooth and has a light grey color.

SEEDS
The female sheoaks have small seed cones which are like flowers. The male sheoaks have small orange flowers which are in a long hanging stem which the tree takes care of after more.

NOONGAR
The Noongar people call the sheoak "warril" which means "the Noongar women have children".
The sheoak was used by the Noongar people because the wood is so hard that it would make good firewood. They also used it for building houses and for making tools. The Noongar people also used it for making spears and shields.

ZAMIA PALM

The Zamia Palm also known as the Macrozamia ricallei is a species of cycad and not actually a palm tree. It is endemic to the south west of Western Australia. The Zamia Palm has been around since dinosaurs and some grow to be 5000 years old.

DESCRIPTION

POEMS

Zamia palms are admired.
A palm tree couldn't compare.
Many long fronds and red fruit.
It's a cycad not a palm.

Alive and Strong

The palm like shrub usually has a short trunk up to two metres high with long arching fronds of a singular kind. There are a separate male and female plants. The female plant usually produce one or two cones, up to 40 centimetres long. When ripe they are barrel shaped and a flowersant red colour. The male cones can not be eaten but if prepared properly the female cones can. The Aborigines would bury them for some time this cooks them then roast them. Some Zamia palms spread their pollen by wind or insects while some palm trees are pollinated by their central cone and attracting weevils.

HABITAT

The Zamia palm is found mostly in collections, most Zamia palms are fairly adaptable but they are intolerant to frost. The Zamia palms are found mostly in savannah forest. To thrive they require slightly shady, warm, humid conditions with much humid, rich, well drained soil.

CLASS 8 PLAY - THIS WEEK!

This week Class 8A take to the stage for their performance of A Midsummer Night's Dream.

A Midsummer Night's Dream is a comedy written by William Shakespeare in 1595/96. It portrays the events surrounding the marriage of Theseus, the Duke of Athens, to Hippolyta (the former queen of the Amazons). These include the adventures of four young Athenian lovers and a group of six amateur actors (the mechanicals) who are controlled and manipulated by the fairies who inhabit the forest in which most of the play is set. The play is one of Shakespeare's most popular works for the stage and is widely performed across the world.

Please join us in Williams Hall on Wednesday, 20th November at 10:40am and 6:30pm.

CLASS 12 PLAY

In their last week at school the year 12 students are packing up shop and moving on to the Subiaco Arts Centre. They have choreographed a series of lively 60's dances for the play and are learning the accompanying music, selected by the music production team; with classic 60's hits. Students have also learned breathtaking, yet safe, wrestling moves.

To see all this and more in effect, tickets are on sale now and can be purchased on the Perth Theatre Trust website. Don't miss out on this once-in-a-lifetime experience.
